

Don't Let Duke Energy Kill Solar Competition for North Carolina

The bipartisan Energy Freedom Act would allow qualified companies to install solar panels on customers' property at no up-front cost and sell them the power.

The Energy Freedom Act would make rooftop solar more accessible to people of all income levels.

Every new solar panel helps all customers by eliminating Duke Energy's case to continually raise rates to build expensive power plants we don't need.

Polls show that North Carolinians across the political spectrum and the business community support "no money down solar."

But Duke Energy is lobbying furiously to block the Energy Freedom Act to protect its monopoly control and profits.

North Carolina is one of only five states prohibiting solar companies from selling power directly to customers.
